Users mainly rely on Google for their search needs.

When searching for information related to "Data" content, Google is the top choice for users. This shows a strong preference for Google in addressing these specific queries.

However, if a website lacks engaging content or doesn't provide valuable information, users will be less likely to discover or be interested in the company's keywords. If a website isn't visually appealing or doesn't provide meaningful insights, it may not attract or retain users effectively.
